St. Denis Girl Pleads Not Guilty of Murder Attempt

LOWELL, Sept. 27.—Cled in her best blue suit, black picture hat and patent leather dancing pumps, which she had recently ordered to be sent to her at the jail, sixteen-year-old Gladys St. Denis pleaded not guilty to charge brought in the juvenile session of Lowell district court today to a charge of attempting murder by poison of her mother and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Jordan. She waived examination, through her attorney, and was held in $4,000 for the superior court. In default of bail she was put back in Lowell jail.

indication of possible violence. A crowd of seven hundred gathered about the gates of the Washington mill at noon, but was orderly. There were a score of I. W. O. pickets in the throng. A sergeant and two policemen were stationed there, but had little to do. Fifty special policemen were held ready at headquarters to rush out in automobiles at a moment's notice. William B. Yates and Edward Macdonald, the latter of Spokane, Wash., I. W. O. leaders, are in charge. They said today, of the new strike. Yates says he has sent for William B. Yates, American head of the new strike. Yates says he has sent for William B. Yates, American head of the new strike. Yates says he has sent for William B. Yates, American head of the new strike.

Mayor Looks for Peace.
Mayor John Lawrence made this statement this forenoon:
"Everything at present has quieted down. I look for a speedy adjustment of the trouble. I am awaiting developments. Most of the employees, I feel, want to work."
James J. Sullivan, the City Marshal, declared also that all was peaceful. He said the police were in thorough control of the situation.

William M. Wood, President of the American Woollen Company, could not be found today. At the Lawrence and Barton offices it was said he was in New York.

Jailed for Assault.

Giuseppe Herpinio of No. 100 Elm street was fined $5 in the Police Court today for disturbing the peace. He was in a crowd dispersed near the Washington mill, Haverhill street, No. 50 Oak street, was fined $10 for malicious mischief in breaking electric light globes in the Wood mill when the strikers walked out. He was sentenced to thirty days in jail for a charge of assault on operatives. Andrea Waila of No. 16 Elm street, arrested during the same disturbance, was discharged.

Sweeping out of the American Woollen Company factories, the operatives poured past the Lower South and Kimball mills. At both they attempted to rush the gates. Several men tried to climb over, but were dragged back by the police. At last strikers were driven away. Most of the operatives went to their homes, though some gathered in halls to listen to speeches by their leaders. Many, however, remained on the street, marching from house to house and attempting to get out the workers in the mills unaffected by the strike. There will be a mass meeting tonight.

The American Woollen Company gave out the statement today:
"The officials of the American Woollen Company say that they do not know any cause for the present strike at Lawrence. The employees have presented no grievance or made any demand relative to wages since the settlement of the strike in March last. Everything has been proceeding satisfactorily since the settlement of the former strike. No formal notice was given that a strike was to occur at this time, and they assume that the strike is intended merely for a demonstration having some relation to the strike of last year. They further said that they had every reason to believe that after the demonstration had been made and the operatives returned to their work and business could be resumed."

Etter Trial Monday.

The trial of Etter and Arturo M. Giovanniotti on a charge of being accessories to the shooting of Annie Le Veau during the strike here last winter, opens in Salem Monday. The first skirmish in the legal battle, held last Monday, resulted in a partial verdict for Etter's counsel. Etter then sent a personal letter to the operative, urging them not to strike, but continue their work in the mills, and promising to visit to see what the trial would take.

A meeting of the Italian operatives of the city was held last night, and in seven

In doing this the District Attorney formed with the ruling of Judge Quinn, who will try the case, that the defendant lawyers be furnished with a list of the charges against them. The District Attorney also filed a copy of the charges with the clerk of court. He declined to make them public without the consent of the defendant's attorneys, as he did not know whether they would be willing to have them go before the public and the possible jurors who may be called on the case. He admitted, however, that there were not many facts in addition to those which have already appeared in the indictment.

Filene's Automatic Bargain Basement

Today We Answer Questions Frequently Asked About the Automatic Bargain Basement

"When does the first reduction take place?" All goods remaining unsold after 12 selling days are automatically reduced 25%. They are reduced 50% after 18 selling days, 75% at the end of 24 and are given away if unsold at the end of 30 selling days.

"Is it true that Filene's does not control the Automatic Bargain Basement?" This basement store is part of the Filene organization. We have no leased departments. The basement has, however, its own buyers.

"Does the merchandise in the Basement come from the Upstairs Departments?" Very little of it does. The Basement buys its goods just like a separate store.

"Does the Basement sell only low-priced lines?" The Basement sells merchandise at any and all prices—low, medium and high. Its only restrictions are that the merchandise must be at bargain prices and of dependable quality.

"Is the $5 reward a puzzle contest?" The $5 reward is paid only when a fact is exaggerated or misrepresented. It is not a puzzle contest and is solely for the purpose of keeping our advertising truthful.

"How is it that sometimes the same goods are on sale at two prices?" This happens when two lots of the same goods are placed on sale at different dates. The first lot, if any remains, takes the Automatic Reductions, while the second is still at the first price.

The Best Place to Buy Men's Clothing Why?

1st—Because for many years we have had the reputation for clothing made of the longest-wearing materials.
2nd—Because we turn our stocks more frequently than other stores and you see no old styles here. (On September 1st we had but $100 worth of last season's styles left), therefore you see only 1912-1913 styles here.

3rd—Because of our organization, we can and do give the best clothing values in Boston. Fifty-nine years in the business is your guarantee of good value at White's.

Georges Model
Clothes

It is the centre of attraction for the really smart dressers of the town, presenting, as usual, styles, shapes, fabrics, colors and patterns that ready-made stocks will not embrace until next year.

I certainly want you to see the new double-breasted styles. When double-breasted coats were last in vogue, the "upholstered" shoulder was in its height, and the beauty of the garment was lost. Now, with natural shoulders, it's a star style—at least as expressed in GEORGES Custom Model Clothes. $12.50 to $40.

The Americanized English soft roll Sack Suits, in two, three and four-button styles, will please you, $12.50 to $40.

The suit fabrics cover a well-nigh undescribeable range of new ideas, prominent among which are the changing two-tone effects. Club checks are strong, also wide-waisted.

In Fall Overcoats—while Black and Oxford Checkered will lose none of their established popularity, the younger men will snap up my new London Guard Coats with plain or pleated belted back, in variously colored Scotch Tweeds. $12.50 to $35.

My English Cabardines and domestic and foreign Raincoats, a tremendous stock, range $5 to $25.

DAKOTA DAN COACHED, SAYS NASON

Russell Lawyer Declares Morton Went to Dakota and Taught the Claimant.

old for a new examination of mine that he came from Melrose.
"Tell me the facts in detail."
"Nothing more than he came from Melrose."
"Did he give you his name?"
"Yes."
"What name did he give?"
"Dan Russell."
"Did he state anything about his family?"
"No."
"Did he say anything about when he left Melrose, or on what business he was there?"
"No."

Identifies Dakota Dan.
"What business was he in in North Dakota?"
"He was in the wool business and was with McIntosh & Barry."
"How often did you see Dan Russell?"
"Between seventy-five and one hundred times."
"You saw the person in court you knew in Dakota as Dan Russell?"
"Yes."
"Where is he?"
"Over there—the man with the glasses."
"Stand up, Dan," said Johnston. Dakota Dan stood.
"Is that the man?" asked Johnston.
"Yes, sir," replied Morton readily and with confidence.
"Mr. Nason cross-examined Morton. The witness said his business was to move wool from ranches and get it ready for shipping."
"Now were the strong man from North Dakota?" suggested Mr. Nason. "When did you first meet Dan Russell in the West?"

"In 1900 and 1901."
"How did you meet him?"
"I met the representative of McIntosh & Barry."
"Morton testified that Dan Russell's name was on the wool of McIntosh & Barry. Morton said he met Dan Russell in the wool business during his four years in the West. He said he knew Dan Russell from that time through his connection with McIntosh & Barry. Morton said he met Dan Russell in 1904 at the time he met Dan Russell's claimant, Mr. Nason, said Morton. "What business was he in?"
"I went to see Dakota Dan."
"I saw him in Boston about two years ago. I went to see him."
"Why did you go to see him?"
"To see an old friend. I went of my own free will."

"What would he have in 1904?"
"He never had a mustache or whiskers."
"Morton is a well-built man of about forty. He has light hair and a reddish mustache. He talks at least three hundred words a minute and he is the first man in the case to make Schurman jealous because of his marvelous fluency of speech."
"Are you quite sure that the claimant said he came from Melrose?" asked Nason.
"Yes."
"Are you sure it wasn't Malone he mentioned?"
"No."
"Malone, N. Y. is the former home of Jim Russell."
"When did you see him last before today?"
"I work all day Sunday at the Hotel Curtis where he is staying in Boston."
"Mr. Schurman asked in redirect examination:
"Did you ever see Dakota Dan drink with you?"
"No, I don't remember, but I've drunk good many times."
Aunt Sarah Takes Stand.
Mrs. Sarah Louise Crafts, better known as "Aunt Sarah" and a relative of the Melrose Russell family, was called to the stand. She is sixty-seven years old, single, and lives at 1111 Broadway street. "What relation are you to the family?"
"My father and I are related to Daniel Blake Russell's mother."
"Do you see any of Daniel Russell's children in court?"
"Yes."
"Whom do you see?"
"There is Daniel pointing to Dakota Dan and there is William pointing to William C. Russell."
"You know both of the boys well?"
"Yes, as I know them."
"You are 'them often'?"
"Yes, I do."
This claimant Mr. Schurman's direct examination. Mr. Nason walked over and whispered to Mr. Alay and Mr. Epton.

Then he became his cross-examination of Mrs. Crafts with this question:
"Were you friendly with the Russell family when Daniel left in 1897?"
"Yes," replied Aunt Sarah. "The witness said she did not visit the Russell home as frequently as formerly during the four or five years previous to the Melrose home. She went to the home occasionally and usually met Daniel and Mrs. Russell."
"Did you see William Russell?"
"Yes."
"Did you see Daniel Blake Russell either at his home?"
"Yes, once or twice I met him outside."
"Did you speak to him?"
"Yes, to ask how his mother was."
"Mr. Nason showed Aunt Sarah a small picture of Daniel Blake Russell, but she said she had no recollection of the picture. Aunt Sarah testified that Daniel Blake Russell had brown eyes when he was five years old. His hair was rather light, but was getting darker."

First Relative to Identify.
The court room was crowded tonight with Melrose witnesses. They listened with closest attention to this line looking, aged lady of Melrose. She is the first relative to identify Dakota Dan as Daniel Blake Russell since the previous trial began. Three of the witnesses, Mr. Harrington, Miss Keith and Mr. Moore, have done so.

Mr. Nason is not nearly finished with his cross-examination of Dakota Dan, but will be recalled for further questioning by Mr. Nason. The calling of the little girl, who was a witness in the previous trial, was a surprise to the court.

DEATHS

WILLIAM HERMAN GUTCHER, president of the Globe National Bank in Worcester, is dead in his seventy-first year. He was a part department commander for Rhode Island of the Grand Army of the Republic.

SAMUEL J. WIGGIN, an attorney, died suddenly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George B. McDonald, No. 9 Pleasant street, Wakefield. He was the last of the original members of the Smith & Wiggins law firm.

THE ALBERT WOOD, a veteran of the Civil War and an insurance agent, died in the medical office of Worcester, at that city, at the age of seventy-five. He held many positions of honor in connection with his profession.

PROF. HENRY PRITZER, dean of the College of Letters and Science of St. Lawrence University, dropped dead of apoplexy in his class room. He was sixty-four years old.

JOSEPH MARSTON, the millstone cut operator, was seized with apoplexy while in the millstone cut at No. 1 Broadway, New York, and died in an ambulance en route to a hospital. He was sixty-four years old.

THREE OF THE WITNESSES. Mr. Harrington, Miss Keith and Mr. Moore, have done so.

Mr. Nason is not nearly finished with his cross-examination of Dakota Dan, but will be recalled for further questioning by Mr. Nason. The calling of the little girl, who was a witness in the previous trial, was a surprise to the court.

tion to the Others.

Witness testified that the link was not about the case.
Questioned further by Mr. Nason, Mrs. Crafts testified that she saw Dakota Dan after his return on April 27, 1904, at her home. The witness could not describe Daniel Blake Russell's facial appearance with any detail as recalled to her. She said that she remembered him more because of his peculiar appearance.
"He was down-sloped, hunched, long hair and shaggy looking in his walk so that I would know him in a crowd of men."
"You saw Frank R. Morton?"
"Yes, I have known him seven or eight years."
"Did you hear his testimony at the last trial?"
Mr. McCarthy, sitting for Mr. Nason, who he was about from the court, asked: "Nason made this statement: 'I claim that Morton and the claimant in North Dakota, and there made an agreement with him to assist in his identification as Daniel Blake Russell.'"

DAWSON HEADS 1914 AT BOSTON COLLEGE FOR THE THIRD TIME

After one of the sharpest contests ever held in a class election, Patrick J. Dawson of East Boston was elected president of the Junior class at Boston College. This will be his third year in the presidency of the class of 1914. Other officers elected were: Thomas J. Finigan of Hales, vice president; John J. Joyce of Quincy, treasurer; Austin R. Keenan of Roxbury, secretary.

200,000 TYPHOON VICTIMS HOMELESS

TOKIO, Sept. 27.—Every official dispatch received today from the quarters of Japan swept by the great typhoon increased the magnitude of the disaster. At least 1,000 persons are dead and twice that many are missing. About 200,000 are homeless. The damage is estimated, so far as today's activities show, at $25,000,000, although it undoubtedly will be much greater when the full extent of the damage is known. Heavy storms still are raging off the coast.

SAGE AND SULPHUR, OLD-TIME REMEDY, A SCALP TONIC AND COLOR RESTORER

For generations Sage and Sulphur have been used for hair and scalp troubles. Almost everyone knows the value of such a combination in keeping the hair a good even color, for curing dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair, and for promoting the growth of the hair. Years ago the only way to get a Hair Tonic of this kind was to make it in the home, which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays, almost any up-to-date drugstore can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully prepared in perfectly equipped laboratories.

are combined with other valuable remedies for scalp troubles and thin, weak hair that is losing its color or coming out. After using this remedy for a few days, you will notice the color gradually coming back, your scalp will feel better, the dandruff will soon be gone, and in less than a month's time there will be a wonderful difference in your hair. Don't neglect your hair if it is full of dandruff, losing its color or coming out. Get a fifty-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

MANY PROTEST FREIGHT DELAY

Interstate Commerce Commission's Protest Board more complaints today about the delay in freight service on the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroad system, at the Federal building here, which was resumed yesterday, having been postponed since July.

That the freight service on the Boston & Maine was extremely slow and irregular was testified to by Fred N. Putnam of the Newbury Board of Trade. He said that he had kept watch on four consecutive shipments of goods from Newbury to Dorchester and it took from eight to twelve days before the shipments arrived.

Albert Snyder, representing the Western New England Traffic Bureau of Springfield, testified that a majority of the complaints were on shipments going north from Springfield to the Boston & Maine. He said that the Moore Cattle Company had been shipping goods to Manchester, N. H., and that it took from six to seven days before the shipments arrived. This resulted in the company being unable to do business in Manchester because the dealers there claimed they could get better service by through trains from Boston.

HARAHAN HEADS SEABOARD AIR LINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—WILLIAM A. Harahan has been elected president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to succeed N. B. McMillan.

Girl Refuses to Say "Obey" at Rehearsal; the Wedding Is Off

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Miss Elizabeth De Noailles Blauvelt, late of No. 155 West Twenty-second street, did not become the wife of Morris Hildman of Bedford Hills, N. Y., September 21 because at a rehearsal the night before she refused to say she would obey.

This refusal, made at just when a party of friends were gathered in the Washington Square Methodist-Episcopal Church, was taken seriously by Mr. Hildman. He therefore went to the home of the young woman and told her the wedding would not take place.

Frank Haring, the Rev. Edgar Leach of Kingsbridge officiating at the wedding, it has been decided to have Earl Leach, a brother of the minister, become active in his law office on Wall street. Exactly what the lawyer will decide should be done by Miss Blauvelt will be announced later.

JOHN D. HAS "FIRST JOB" ANNIVERSARY

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—John D. Rockefeller, oil merchant, has a little anniversary of his own, which he has just celebrated. It is "First Job Day." On the fifty-seventh anniversary of his first job days, worked at Power Hill and John D. took a walk over the golf links. His first job was in 1855 in the office of Hewitt & Tuttle, commission men. He was thirteen then.

HILLES ISSUES TARIFF DEFINITION

The Democrats are challenged to define their stand on the tariff, by Chairman Hilles of the Republican National Committee.

He declared that the purpose of the third-party leader and his followers seemed to be to enable "free-trade" Democrats to control Congress.

Hilles is with the President at the Summer White House.

In his statement he said: "I see that it is intimated by Governor Wilson that the Republican party is trying to evade discussion on the tariff, but it seems to me that in that respect the boot is on the other leg."

"I have yet to find in any of the Democratic speeches a clear definition of what they propose to do with regard to the tariff, if they control the government."

"In my opinion this is a vital question which the Democratic candidate must face before the campaign closes, and is an issue on which the thousands of Democratic business men who voted for Taft four years ago will be found voting for him again this fall."

WOMAN GIVES AWAY $300 IN MATTRESSES

Mrs. Della Hilley of Albany street gave her old mattress to a poor neighbor and forgot she had hidden a $300 board in it.

The neighbor moved, bought the mattress and took it apart. They found the money and had spent all but $75 before Mrs. Hilley heard of the excitement and read in the news.

"Ballet Girls Here Wonderful"

BALLET MISTRESS MARIE PAPORELLO

By JOHN P. WHITMAN.

The same ship that brought to America Luigi Costelli, Filippo Bionelli, Ugo Donatelli and many other distinguished gentlemen from Italy to the annual Congress of Chambers of Commerce also brought Marie Paporello.

The little lady, seen in her apartment on Homewood street, expressed no great interest in the world's commercial congress, but when asked to tell something about her girls and the American ballet of the Boston Opera, she immediately became all smiles.

"Oh! I love to be back in Boston, and I think it the best place to live in the whole world," she said.

Nor does her rapture stop with the mere city of Boston, but extends right down to her girls, her pupils whom she has brought up and taught for the last four years—ever since the Opera House opened.

"I love my girls just as though they were my very own, the whole thirty-two of them. That would be a large family, wouldn't it?"

When she speaks of her work and her group of dancers there is no doubting her sincerity. She fairly beams over the entire company and promises many surprises and new features.

"I cannot say just what we shall do," she explained, "but I have worked hard this summer, both in France and Italy, studying out new combinations and step variations that will surely please the public."

She went on to explain that there is nothing absolutely new in stock, but that new figures can be evolved.

"I shall have something very fine in preparation and groupings," she said, "and to hope we may be able to give a ballet performance, for I am sure the Boston public will appreciate such a performance."

Of course, she added, "I cannot say anything definite until after November arrives, and that will not be until the latter part of October."

Marie Paporello is slight, but the embodiment of grace and artistic motion. She describes her efforts with the girls with descriptive gestures.

"How do I teach them and how much practice do they need?" She repeated this question to make sure that she understood just what was meant, and then gave a little history of her efforts since she first came to America to train the Boston ballet.

"I took them when they were very young. Some were still school girls four years ago and most of them knew nothing about classical dancing. Oh, but it was hard work. It made me very warm."

Here the little ballet mistress swept her hand across her brow to expunge what she felt was sweat from her face.

"They were awkward and stiff, and many of them who came had to be discarded. Some were too tall and others too short."

"The best were fairly selected, and they are wonderful. The American girls are so eager to learn, and they pay such good attention. I delight to work with them. These girls of mine are the very best type, and they live with their mothers most of them."

"They have to be true artists, for a successful classical dancer is more, not trained from impossible material. Dancing is the finest of all arts. It begins with the head and includes the eyes, the smile, the body, the feet—all must be in perfect harmony."

"I shall have something very fine in preparation and groupings," she said, "and to hope we may be able to give a ballet performance, for I am sure the Boston public will appreciate such a performance."

Of course, she added, "I cannot say anything definite until after November arrives, and that will not be until the latter part of October."

CARRY SUGAR TO TEMPT KEENAN

BOSTON, Woods, N. H., Sept. 27.—Searching parties who set out today to capture the hunt for John M. Keenan, the Charleston boy just over a week ago, carried with them large quantities of sugar.

This was again the suggestion of one of the old guides. He believes Keenan may have survived by eating grass or leaves, and the sugar is to be used to tempt the boy if he is found wandering in the forest.

Infant Paralysis Caused by Insects, Says Dr. Richardson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Dr. Mark W. Richardson, secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, today described his new theory regarding infantile paralysis in which he holds that the scourge is spread by insects. He said:

"The occurrence of infantile paralysis in Massachusetts seems to have a distinct preference for localities situated along river beds. In 1907 it was especially so."

Gravels along the banks of the Housatonic, Connecticut rivers, in the Berkshires District, and in the Valley of the Merrimack. A year later the Deerfield River Valley was the seat of a marked epidemic. In 1907 the localities coincided with that of the epidemic cerebro-spinal meningitis."

DE KOVEN HERE FOR 'ROBIN HOOD'

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The man with the moustache, the English tenor, the talented young moustache and the mannered debonair, whom you may have seen on Washington street today, was Richard De Koven.

Time usually flies, but in dealing with the composer of "Robin Hood" it moves slower than a horse in a maze.

De Koven looks like a young thing of about thirty, which would make him in the neighborhood of seven when he composed "Robin Hood." We know that he was much older.

It was on the stage of the Boston Theatre away back in 1890 that Richard De Koven told Henry Clay Barnabee the story of Robin Hood. De Koven's "Don Quixote" had been produced the previous night.

Without hearing a note of the music and knowing only the bare outline of the plot, a contract was immediately made for the opera. That's the way the old Bostonians did business, and if they hadn't grown too old they would be doing business that way yet.

Henry Clay Barnabee is a very old man living in retirement in Jamaica Plain, most of the original Bostonians are dead or in old age, and yet Richard De Koven is still with us and just as young as he used to be.

Robin Hood Coming Here. He is coming to the Boston Theatre with a cast greater than even "The Merchant of Venice" could ever give it, and the reason for Mr. De Koven's visit is to see that it gets a proper welcome.

"I am a bit of a missionary," said Mr. De Koven, "in this venture, and I'll tell you what I am trying to accomplish. I want to show that true opera company is a masterpiece of art form, and that it is a perfectly legitimate acquisition for musical people to engage in."

For years in this country opera companies were almost banished by a strange combination of stuffy conservatism and comic opera. Anything with any kind of a song in it was called comic opera. The music was written by people who didn't know anything about musical composition, and it offered no end whatever for people who could actually sing.

Believe in Melody. "Europe is full of young America and we trying for grand opera with insufficient equipment. Most of those people would be successful in opera companies if there was such a permanent form of entertainment in America. I hope that the kind of organization which is now giving "Robin Hood" will show the American people how good opera companies are when it is properly done. Then we may have great singing in comic opera as we do now in grand opera and it will not be considered beneath them for grand opera singing."

Royal Business Waits as Envoy Pays Court to Heiress at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 27.—What is a King or a King's business to charming Miss Florence Tobin? Nothing.

What's a King's envoy to this belle of the East and heiress of the West? That's something else.

His name is Prince Genaro Caracciolo, and he has been taken from King Victor and Queen Helena of Italy. He presented just one here and within two days he was invited everywhere. He was going right away to the west but—

Then he met Miss Tobin. Every day, and sometimes twice a day, the bearer of the noble name and the royal mandate is seen strolling with the dainty daughter of Mrs. James J. Brown, whose husband made his fortune in the good old American way, lick axe to palace.

It's hardly strolling at that. Miss Tobin is a beauty and an athlete and she sets the Prince, who is forty, a flogging pace for fifteen miles at a stretch.

Miss Tobin will be starting for the West shortly. There are rumors that the royal messenger might start about the same time. Although he is the most democratic nobleman entertained here in years, he is guarded by detectives night and day.

He is to make excursions into the field of light opera.

"I believe in melody. I think that every composer who can invent a good melody gladly does so. Much of this talk about music drama by modern composers is intended to conceal their melodic weakness."

"My melody I don't mean any cheap tunes which can be memorized the first time it is heard. A good melody is also a constant surprise even to one who has heard it several times. It is that sort of melody that lives."

"Take 'The Merry Widow.' There is a true fine opera which will not endure because of the prevalence in it of a bad taste. The writer melody was instantly seized upon by the public, worked to death, and now nobody ever wants to hear any more. And yet there are so many charming things in the score."

"I am looking for a good libretto. I have had several works spoiled by a bad libretto, and I do not want to make the mistake of setting music to a book that will condemn it."

"By the way, 'Robin Hood' is to be given in March this year. It will be produced there by the same people who recently revived Offenbach's 'La Belle Helene' so successfully."

This newspaper has been the FRIEND of working people of this community EVER SINCE IT WAS FOUNDED.

Mr. Hearst, the proprietor of this newspaper, HAS DEFENDED AND EXPUNDED THE CAUSE OF THE WORKINGMEN IN ALL HIS PUBLICATIONS FROM THE ATLANTIC TO THE PACIFIC.

This newspaper denounced the judicial proceedings against Ettor from the beginning. THIS NEWSPAPER BELIEVES THAT A GREAT WRONG HAS BEEN DONE Mr. Ettor and his two associates, and we have said so publicly over and over again.

Therefore, you will believe that when we speak to you on the present occasion, WE ARE SPEAKING TO YOU AS A FRIEND AND NOT AS AN ENEMY. We speak to you directly and frankly because we believe that our friendship for Mr. Ettor and his just cause gives us a right to speak and makes it our duty.

THE AMERICAN urges you with all the strength or earnestness it can to FOLLOW THE ADVICE WHICH MR. ETTOR GIVES YOU TO AVOID VIOLENCE AND ANY BREACH OF THE LAW.

Do not play into the hands of your enemies. Remember why dynamite was planted in houses of some of your companions.

Remember that YOU WON YOUR STRIKE because public sympathy was with you.

TO STRIKE NOW FOR NO OTHER REASON THAN TO EXPRESS YOUR SYMPATHY WITH ETTOR MAY COST YOU THAT SAME PUBLIC SYMPATHY THAT WON YOU YOUR STRIKE.

Remember that dynamite was placed in your houses because those who were opposed to you knew that you could not win if the whole people of the State believed that you were lawbreakers and hoped to win your cause by lawless violence.

BE CALM AND STEADY. OBSERVE THE LAW.

Follow the advice of your wise leaders and remember that there stands between Mr. Ettor and injustice a jury of twelve honest men drawn from all walks of life.

REMEMBER THAT THE JURY HAS BEEN ABLE TO PROTECT THE WEAK IN THIS COUNTRY FROM THE STRONG EVER SINCE THE REPUBLIC WAS FOUNDED.

Remember that American citizens rely upon it as their bulwark and their defense. Put your faith in that jury of free and honest men. Once more we urge you to be calm and put your trust in the twelve honest, fearless men who will stand between Mr. Ettor and any attempt to do him injustice.

Says the Judge: "It Might Mean Loss of Dollars"

The Socialists Will Probably Reply, "Loss of Dollars Is No
More Important Than Loss of Ideas"

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

Providence works mysteriously—and performs wonders. You know that.

But could you believe that the mysterious workings of Providence could actually compel such an institution as the Cordage Trust to provide brass bands and turkey trot music for its employes at the noon hour?

Providence put the venomous tooth in the serpent—which probably caused primitive man to make a pair of shoes. The pair of shoes made him a good walker, and so he spread over the earth. Providence made man a vain, monkey-like creature, and as a result he went north for walrus teeth, south for diamonds, east for rubies. He dug into every hillside for gold, and went down to the sea's bottom for pearls. Vanity put man in all of the earth.

The latest news is that Socialism has actually helped the Cordage Trust to display a touching interest in the welfare of its employes while the latter are eating lunch out of tin buckets or newspaper packages at noon.

Originally the Cordage Trust cared as little about the noon hours of its employes as about the fourth dimension or the sweet influences of Florida.

Suddenly a band of Socialist workers appeared among the Cordage workers while the latter were eating their luncheon.

The Socialist workers invited the Cordage workers to throw off their chains and be free. They also invited the Cordage workers to take in their own hands "the means of production." This meant, in plain English, that the Socialists were urging the Cordage workers to strike for more money right away, and vote to take the Cordage Trust and run it for their own profit as soon as possible.

Then came the wonderful change in the heart of the Cordage Trust. It decided that the Socialists must not have a monopoly in the amusing of working men and women at the noon hour.

The Cordage Trust actually hired brass bands to delight its workers at noon and to drown the voices of the Socialist orators. The Trust even went so far as to provide turkey trot and other profane music and to encourage its employes to dance—for the sake of their digestion—from twelve to one.

But the Socialists went right on, offering arguments queerer and more fascinating than any step in the turkey trot or the bunny hug. They sent friends of man, tried and true, that could talk louder than a brass band.

For a long time the neighborhood was amused by the sight of the Socialists, on the one side, yelling: "Rouse, ye slaves; throw off

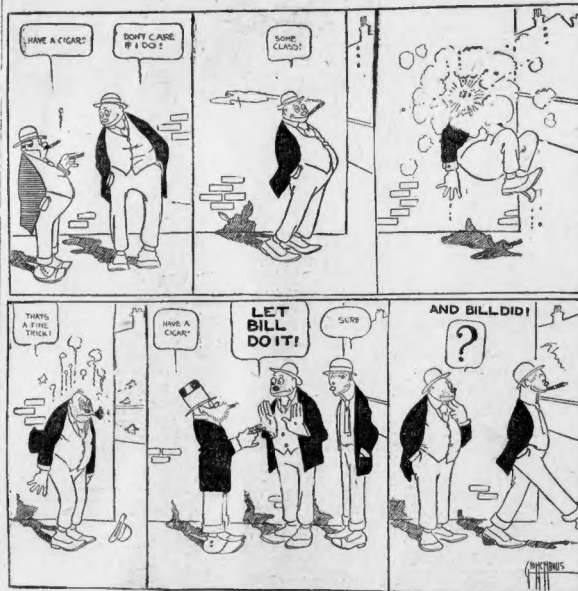

The young bruiser listens intently to the advice of his ring handlers. What a difference there would have been in him if he had listened with the same interest to his mother and teacher.

Your chains and be free!" and the Cordage Trust, on the other side, yelling: "Come now, be good employes, and dance the turkey trot at our expense, and don't listen to the Socialists!"

The workers of the trust, rather intelligently, persisted in encouraging the Socialist talkers—for they owed to those talkers more fun than they had enjoyed in a long time.

At last the Cordage Trust dragged the Socialists into court, demanding an injunction to keep the Socialists from talking to the workmen at noon. The action of the court, when it comes, will be interesting. The Judge is expected to grant the injunction, because he will find that oratory in a commercial district blocking the streets "might mean a loss of thousands of dollars."

The Socialists, of course, will reply that shutting them up might mean a loss of thousands of ideas, that the noon hour is the best for ideas anyhow, and that the founders of the country seemed to consider ideas at least as important as dollars, since they adopted a Constitution that forbids interference with speech.

Smug property has often shown itself silly in dealing with its problems. Unusual is the silliness that financial prosperity shows in dealing with the Socialism that it apparently dreads so much.

Socialist orators arrive on the scene, and the trust that later Socialism hires a brass band to drown it. Naturally, the workmen thank the Socialists for the brass band.

Then the Cordage Trust goes to court and tries to find a Judge that will forbid workmen to talk to other workmen in their own noon hour of leisure—of course, workmen acquainted with the dishonest record of the Cordage Trust and the undesirable character of its birth and breeding will be particularly eager to hear the things that the trust wants suppressed.

Many a man and many a cause have had reason to be thankful for their enemies. The Socialists ought to be doubly and truly thankful. They are advertised industriously by almost every prosperous artist in the United States.

No. 17.—The President's Cabinet, Consisting of Nine Men, Each of Whom Is Chosen for His Ability to Run the Department of Which He Is the Head.

By THOMAS TAPPER

THE affairs of a country so large as the United States constitute an extensive business. Like any other great business, it depends for successful operation upon a head (the President) and a large number of assistants, who are deputized to do certain branches of the work. As the head of no large enterprise can personally attend to everything that arises in the daily progress of its business, so the President of the United States is powerless to run the government alone. So far as in him lies, he is expected to organize the work, to deputize as much of it as possible, and to supervise it all as closely as any one human being can do so.

Associated with the President of the United States are nine men. These nine men constitute what is known as the Cabinet. To each man there is intrusted a department of the government's business. These men are appointed by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate. It is assumed that each man is chosen for his peculiar fitness to do the special work of the department of which he is the head.

Seven of these nine men are known as Secretaries. They are the Secretaries of (1) State, (2) War, (3) Navy, (4) Treasury, (5) Interior, (6) Agriculture, (7) Commerce and Labor. The remaining two are the (8) Attorney General and (9) Postmaster General.

Each Cabinet Officer Has Many Assistants to Carry on Work

Each of these departments is an extensive business requiring a large corps of assistants to carry it on.

The members of the Cabinet meet at the White House to report upon the work of the departments to the President, and to discuss with him all matters of government business and policy. These conferences are known as Cabinet meetings. They constitute a department of government work not provided for in the Constitution.

No record of the Cabinet meetings is made, and the public is not informed of what takes place at them. In fact, the Cabinet has no legal existence, in a strict sense. It is merely an advisory body. The President may, or may not, follow the advice of the Cabinet members. Their duty is to consult with him and to offer such advice as seems to them pertinent. The duty of the President is to make up his own mind, after weighing all evidence, and then to decide on his own responsibility.

The Most Important Cabinet Officer Is the Secretary of State

The Constitution provides, in case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of that office, that the Vice-President shall succeed to the office. In the event of the removal of the Vice-President, in turn, before the expiration of the term, the office of President devolves upon the Secretary of State. In fact, provision is now made for the Presidential succession through the entire list of Cabinet officers. It has happened five times in the history of the United States that the Vice-President has succeeded to the Presidency—John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson, Chester A. Arthur and Theodore Roosevelt being the Vice-Presidents who succeeded to the higher office through the death of the President.

It is generally recognized that the first in importance of the Cabinet officers is the Secretary of State. He has in charge all business between our own and foreign governments. He is, strictly speaking, our Minister of Foreign Affairs. He is authorized (and no other Cabinet officer is) to negotiate with foreign governments in the name of the President. It is the duty of the Secretary of State to supervise the publication of all laws, treaties and proclamations.

The salary of each Cabinet officer is $12,000 per year, a small sum when one considers the importance of the office to be filled and the experience and skill necessary to fill them properly. It has been urged that the services of Cabinet officers would be of greater value to the government if they were given seats in Congress. This would tend to loosen the restrictions by which the officers are bound.

It must be remembered that the nine Executive departments of our government were created by acts of Congress; and the bringing together of these nine men to constitute a new organization, advisory to the President, is sanctioned neither by the Constitution nor by law. Custom alone has established the relation of this body of men to the Chief Executive, and the impossibility of any one man attending personally to all the business of the government makes such an advisory body necessary.

He Must Keep in Close Touch with All Presidential Policies

Hence, it has come about that the importance of a Cabinet officer is greater in his relation to the President than to the actual business of his department. For the latter there are skilled assistants to whom the important work of the department is intrusted. But, for the former, the necessity of close and intimate contact with the President, his party and his policies is so great that any considerable difference of opinion between a Cabinet officer and the President generally results in the retirement of the Cabinet member.

Mr. Munsey Appreciates Mr. Hearst's Welcome

I deeply appreciate this generous personal tribute from Mr. Hearst. Only a very big man can be so big. It is incomparably the finest tribute from one newspaper man to another, owing a competing publication, I have ever seen.

This exceptional act means all the more in view of the fact that Mr. Hearst, who is now in Paris, called it to his newspaper, the New York American, and simultaneously with its publication reproduced in another column my statement to the public when I assumed control of this newspaper a week ago last Monday.

This is a very simple acknowledgment of a very splendid innovation in the newspaper world.
